Cleveland Hopkins International Airport Experiencing Isolated Technical Issues

No flights or security operations are impacted as a result

CLEVELAND – Cleveland Hopkins International Airport is experiencing technical issues which are impacting a small number of systems. Email is temporarily down as well as in-airport flight and baggage information screens. All other systems are functioning as normal and there are no impacts to flights or safety and security operations.

The airport is working to resolve the issues and will provide further updates.

While these isolated technical issues are being addressed, all media requests for Cleveland Hopkins International Airport can be directed to the Mayor's Office of Communications at Communications@city.cleveland.oh.us.
